India's Financial Planners Want Investors to Look Beyond Returns

At the Global Financial Planners Summit 2026, industry leaders examined why building wealth is only one part of the financial planning challenge.

What good are higher investment returns if a family is struggling with debt, has inadequate insurance or is unprepared for retirement? And what happens to the wealth accumulated over a lifetime if its eventual transfer has never been planned?

These questions rarely receive as much attention in financial conversations as the search for the next outperforming investment. Yet they formed the central theme of the fourth Global Financial Planners Summit 2026, India's Largest Financial Planners Summit. An initiative by 1 Finance, the event was held on 13th October 2026 at JW Marriott, Sahar, Mumbai.

The tone was set in the Welcome Address by Jeet Marwadi, MD & Founder, 1 Finance. "We focus on alpha, which is least in our control," he observed, pointing out how little attention is often given to decisions within an investor's control.

Jeet illustrated how financial advice can create measurable value without generating higher investment returns. In one household case, replacing four endowment policies with a ₹1 crore term plan, closing a 12% overdraft and continuing an SIP were estimated to add 222 basis points to annual net-worth growth, after fees. The improvement came from better decisions across insurance, borrowing and investments rather than chasing additional alpha.

The example raised a larger question about whether the value of financial advice should be measured only through portfolio returns or also through the costs, risks and financial mistakes it helps families avoid.

What is good financial advice worth?

The panel discussion on Value of Advisory, moderated by Jeet Marwadi, brought together G. Ram Mohan Rao, Executive Director, SEBI; Amit Kukreja, Chairperson, ARIA; Dhirendra Kumar, Founder and Chief Executive, Value Research; and Harsh Roongta, Founder, Fee Only Investment Advisers LLP.

The panel made a case for judging advice beyond returns, particularly through the role advisors play in managing expectations, controlling risk and preventing costly financial decisions. Behaviour management emerged as an equally important part of that responsibility. Harsh Roongta described advisors as "the people who stand between a client and their biggest mistake," while Amit Kukreja urged the profession to focus on behaviour, costs and risk-adjusted returns rather than simply chasing ROI. The value of advice, in this context, lies as much in helping investors make better decisions as in managing their portfolios.

From the value of advice, the conversation moved to the changes investors may face over the next ten years.

In The Decade Ahead Panel, moderated by Sonal Bhutra, Assistant Editor & Markets Anchor, CNBC-TV18, Maninder Cheema of SEBI highlighted opportunities in corporate bonds, REITs and InvITs. Saugata Chatterjee of Nippon India Mutual Fund spoke about taking the SIP culture deeper into Bharat.

Dr. Soumya Kanti Ghosh of State Bank of India examined manufacturing-led growth and geopolitical risks, while Utpal Sheth of TRUST Group drew attention to the changing relevance of businesses and income streams in an economy increasingly influenced by technology. "Today, the more important question is, how relevant is that young investor's income stream?" Utpal Sheth asked, bringing the discussion back to the need to understand an investor's circumstances alongside market opportunities.

A longer life changes the retirement equation

"Grow rich before you grow old."

The message came from S. Ramann, Chairman, PFRDA, during The Retirement Mandate, a fireside conversation with Keval Bhanushali, CEO & Co-Founder, 1 Finance.

Beyond NPS reforms and wider pension participation, the discussion addressed the challenge of making retirement income last for potentially 25 years after employment ends, an aspect that often receives less attention than building a retirement corpus.

S. Ramann also made the case for comprehensive advice, observing that, as a client, he would prefer "one single person to tell me what I need across the whole range of products."

The human side of financial decisions came into focus in Money & Behaviour, featuring Professor Meir Statman of Santa Clara University. The conversation explored the relationship between money, behaviour and wellbeing, a reminder that financial success cannot be understood through numbers alone. It also brought another dimension to the day's discussions: money is not merely a means of accumulating assets, but a means of supporting the life people want to lead.

When wealth becomes a family dispute

The discussion on Will and Estate Planning, moderated by Sonal Bhutra, turned to another uncomfortable subject. She was joined by leading industry professionals, Dr. Deepak Jain, Director, AAFM India & Nexgen, Bijal Ajinkya, Partner, Khaitan & Co. and Sadia Khan, Partner, Shardul Amarchand Mangaldas & Co.

Dr. Deepak Jain described inheritance planning as an emotional problem rather than merely a legal one. He highlighted that advisors sometimes hesitate to raise estate planning because they see no immediate financial incentive. Yet he argued that such conversations can strengthen client trust.

Bijal Ajinkya stressed the importance of clearly drafted wills, while Sadia Khan also spoke about the human cost of succession disputes.

The concern was straightforward. Families can spend decades creating wealth, only to leave its distribution and management uncertain.

Another very important conversation was around Borrowing and Debt, it brought attention to the other side of the household balance sheet.

Moderated by Mugdha Kalra, Senior Anchor, CNBC-TV18, it featured Bharat Lamba, President, DSP Finance; Devyani Parameshwar, Founder and CEO, Mera Kal; Mohan Parsuramka, COO, 1 Finance; and Sachin Seth, Regional MD, India and South Asia, CRIF India.

Mohan Parsuramka offered a telling example of a family with ₹5 crore in assets and ₹4 crore in debt. The investments may look substantial, but the liabilities raise an entirely different set of questions.

"Borrowing is a bridge, not a lifestyle," Bharat Lamba cautioned. Devyani Parameshwar discussed the experiences of first-time borrowers, while Sachin Seth explained why creditworthiness involves much more than a credit score.

The summit highlighted how financial advice cannot be viewed in isolation. A family's investments, debts, retirement needs, financial behaviour and responsibilities towards the next generation are all connected. For financial planners, the challenge is not simply to help clients accumulate more assets, but to ensure those assets serve the lives they were meant to support.

Financial planning is ultimately about making better decisions across different stages of life. Knowing where to invest matters, but understanding what that money is meant to achieve matters even more. Warren Buffett said, "Price is what you pay. Value is what you get." The same principle applies to financial advice, where its worth extends beyond investment returns to the decisions it helps people make.

The conversations at GFPS 2026 reinforced the importance of looking at the complete financial picture. For individuals, seeking guidance from a qualified financial advisor can help turn that understanding into a financial plan that reflects their needs, responsibilities and long-term goals.
